To the young men of this place obstinate and of long standing, have been so suddenly cured by Branc's Pulls, that their effects not, in that condition, be sold for five dollars. We are informed Ellis, the Nezperce Chief, with a few of his braves, while on a visit to this valley last summer, purchased in exchange for horses, over one hundred head of cows. This speaks well for the civilization of these Indians, while it confirms the opinion heretofore expressed that, no part of the territory of the United States is there a better opportunity afforded to test the experiment of ultimately civilizing the savages. The great difficulty in making shepherds or a pastoral people of the Indians on the borders of the states is, the absence of winter feed. They have in many instances been furnished by the government with live stock, but the maintenance of these, the succeeding winter required manual labor through the previous summer to be performed by one unaccustomed to work. This change being too rapid, the attempt to become civilized is abandoned by the savage.
